For the Rabbits UK recently premiered ROSELIT BONE's latest music video for "Leech Child," from 2017's BLISTER STEEL, calling it "a nightmarish, cinematic vision of the bleak and the beautiful colliding. A dystopian world, full of ghoulish cowboys, wide-screen barren vistas, and a nagging doubt of whether you'll even make it out of here with your mind intact." Watch the video for "Leech Child" HERE.

"ROSELIT BONE is the place where NICK CAVE and ENNIO MORRICONE meet, where old style honky tonk collides with psychedelic noise scapes and indie attitude. Suffice to say that ROSELIT BONE [...] create a moody, brooding, unique hybrid sound that gets under your skin and paints stark pictures in your mind. HANK WILLIAMS has a beer with WILLIAM S. BURROUGHS in an empty desert honky tonk as DAVID LYNCH lurks behind a velvet curtain."

For their Fringe performances, every night at PHOENIX BELOW from August 9 thru 26, the band will be performing as an acoustic trio, presenting stripped-down but all the more haunting and intimate versions of original songs and traditional western ballads.

"BLISTER STEEL' is a runaway success ... an unnerving set of booze-soaked, blood-curdling hellfire hymns that sound like very few other bands anywhere"

The Portland Mercury

"Like MARTY ROBBINS meets THE CRAMPS, or a GOBLIN soundtrack to a spaghetti western, rancho fantasy meets greased up country in a magical reality."
